

Corn Snake (Elaphe guttata), another one often mistaken for a copperhead. However, these snakes are harmless. Their pattern is also very distinguishable from a copperhead once you know what you're looking for. Corn snakes are native to mostly Southern North Carolina.